UP A TREE

It is easier to climb up a tree than to climb down often. That is why you hear of so many people being "up a tree." Seeing a bird's nest in a tree in the backyard, and being consumed with a mild curiosity to see if Madam Robin had a family there, the writer ventured to climb up, and was well rewarded. There was nothing in the nest, but imagine his excitement on finding that the late residents had made use of tinker tape, in addition to other materials, in constructing their nest.

Ticker Tape

The writer had been in the habit of thinking of birds as going along, year after year, in the same happy way, unaware of progress, using the methods of their pleistocene ancestors, and the same materials, with the exception of modern strains of grass or Marquis wheat straws, or an occasional piece of modern white string off a bag of sugar. But here they were, using tinker tape, and the stock market and the teletype. Did Madam Robin spend the long hours of incubating studying the stock market?

Quick Brown Fox

Eagerly the explorer rescued the pieces of tinker tape from the nest, leaving the nest unweakened, and read: "Not sending. 1234567890. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog's back." The same message appeared three times. What did Madam Robin make of that? Here were all the figures of the modern world and all the letters of the alphabet. What did Madam Robin make of them? Did it worry her as much to read about "quick brown foxes" and "lazy dogs" as it worried Mr. Stock Market Investor to read about the bears and the bulls? Had she got into the market, and couldn't get out? Was she up a tree?

Learning the Alphabet

The writer was up a tree himself, and he wasn't quite sure how to get down. There seemed to be less branches going down than coming up. While he was struggling with his problem of getting down out of a tree he began to think how like his situation was to the stock market. The stock market is easy to get into, if you have a little money, but it is often, very often, hard to get out of, if you expect to have the same money you started with. Still, the stock market had its good points, it was a place to gain experience, to learn, the first requirement of a satisfying occupation. "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog's back."

MORE SCHOOLS?

Daily Vacation Bible Schools are getting under way in many centres this week. Perhaps such a school would fit into the life of our town, helping to keep children off the street for part of the day. The schools are non-denominational and the program and lesson material is prepared by the Religious Education Council of Canada. The program includes worship, Bible reading, craft instruction and supervised play. Perhaps the best thing that can be said about these schools is that children like to attend them.

IMMIGRATION

If prosperity comes, can immigration be far behind? Canadians have been shutting out people of other countries for so long, in the name of hard times, that they have almost forgotten how sparsely settled their country is. It seemed natural to think that, if there was widespread unemployment in this country, stopping of immigration would help to remedy it. Immigration during the depression years would have added to Canada's troubles, it seems reasonable to think, but now there is a possibility that immigration might speed up the recovery procession.

Balance With City

It would be unfair to Canadian farmers, however, to bring in agriculturists only. That would force down Canadian farm produce prices. Immigrants should be both agriculturists and artisans, maintaining the balance between city and rural population, increasing the producing and consuming capacities of both city and country. It is said that only one-fifth of the land suited for agriculture in Canada is now being utilized. It would not do to fill up this vast area with farmers without a proportionate development of urban Canada.

World Reasons

There is more than our own economic good to the question of immigration. As Canadians we may very well reach the conclusion that the time has come to welcome people from other lands, as a matter of our own economic welfare. As citizens of a world which must become more neighborly as it becomes smaller, we cannot avoid indefinitely the decision to open our doors to the over-crowded populations of Europe (and possibly even to the very different people of Asia).

When The Tide Turns

A reaction must come to the nationalism of today, to the defence plans, the tariff and immigration barriers, to the talk of war. People will become much more world-minded. They will think again in terms of world government of matters of international concern. Little-settled countries such as Canada and Australia will have to be able to satisfy world opinion that they have reasonably wise plans for the development of their fabulous resources in the interests of mankind.

PIPING HOT ENTHUSIASM

The hotter the weather becomes the more enthusiastic these columns become about the Newmarket Firemen's proposed swimming-pool. Even to look forward to a swim in 1940, right here within the confines of our town, is to feel refreshed. That raises a point. Is the swimming-pool for adults as well as children? Now, we hope so. It will be a lot easier to raise the money for the pool if the children's use of it is emphasized, but we do hope that adults may occasionally creep in.

Onward To Success

The firemen have every reason to feel encouraged about the ultimate success of their undertaking. They have encountered difficulties which they did not expect, provincial board of health regulations which will mean extra expense, difficulties concerning a suitable location and concerning an adequate supply of water. Nevertheless, all these difficulties are surmountable, with generous public support, and it is no exaggeration to say that no project in recent years has aroused more interest and enthusiasm on the part of citizens. The Lions club is looking for new worlds to conquer and might very well join forces with the firemen to give Newmarket's children (and grown-ups?) a safe and refreshing artificial lake.

AN UNHAPPY POST

One of the least enviable posts of public responsibility in the province of Ontario today is that of minister of highways. The need for new highways is unlimited, but funds for building them are distinctly limited. It seems as though every new highway or pavement constructed brings more cars upon the roads and makes the situation that much worse. Or is it just improving times putting more automobiles on the roads? The minister of highways is hearing frantic appeals from all parts of the province for new motor routes.

Two Villages On Wheels

The widening of Yonge St. into a three and four lane highway between Newmarket and the city, with the exception of the Richmond Hill to Finch's Corners stretch, should have solved the traffic problem on this important route, but through the bottle-neck on Sunday evening the traffic moved at from five to 15 miles an hour. Motorists drove a few feet and then had to stop. Coming down the Newmarket to Richmond Hill section at 40 to 50 miles an hour, the traffic piled up in Richmond Hill. There were two lanes of traffic at a standstill throughout the entire length of the village. Assuming that the village is half a mile long, that each car would take about 12 feet, and that each car carried five people, there were twice as many people sitting in those two stalled lanes of cars as live in the village. That sounds like the "Trailer-town" of the United States.

Local Needs

The highways department is already working on a provincial highway from Long Branch to Barrie, to relieve Yonge St., and is now considering another north-and-south highway from east Toronto to Sutton as a further relief to Yonge St. The proposed Peterboro to Orangeville highway must come also. This highway would also feed Yonge St. south to the city, but it is expected that it would relieve Yonge St. south of a lot of traffic which now goes to eastern or western Ontario through the city of Toronto. Whatever its effect on the Yonge St. problem, it would certainly relieve the Dundas and Montreal highways of some of their unbearable burden. Or would it just bring, as already suggested, that many more motorists upon the highways of the province? If they were tourists, it would be good business for Ontario, and no matter who they were they would put money back into the provincial treasury.

A WARNING TO ALL MOTORISTS

The death of a three-year-old child on Queen St. under the wheels of a motor-car two weeks ago was a tragedy. It should not be taken merely as a warning to parents to keep children off the streets, for that is not always possible, but should be taken more particularly as a warning to all motorists to drive at a reasonable rate of speed and to keep their cars in control. A speed that is reasonable on a wide pavement is not necessarily reasonable on Newmarket's narrow pavements. This accident should serve as a warning to every motorist in the town.

Children No Wiser

Three-year-old children have no proper sense of danger and will not be more careful because of this unfortunate accident. Motorists will have to be. Motorists must be forever contemplating the possibility of children darting out upon the streets. Pedestrians, including children, have a right to cross the street, even though it is only to chase a ball. Many motorists take the viewpoint that pedestrians go upon the pavement at their own risk. Much of the driving on Newmarket's narrow pavements, both by ourselves and by visitors, is too fast for the safety of children. Twenty to 25 miles an hour on most streets is fast enough. Thirty-five and 40 miles an hour is a menace, but is not uncommon. A stiff police campaign against speeding and reckless driving is needed in order to protect human life, particularly children who have not reached years of discretion.

There will be general regret that the health of the popular chief constable, Thomas Hall, has made his resignation necessary. He has performed his duties without fear or favor, and with good judgment.

A new constable has been appointed, although he has not yet been given the title of "chief constable," to take Chief Hall's place. He is to be required to have an automobile and is to be allowed $5 a week for running it. A bicycle might be more satisfactory and would be cheaper. Toronto police, as is well known, make a great deal of use of bicycles. A constable on a bicycle can stop and take a number a lot more easily than a constable in a car, although a car would be more useful in following a car. But Newmarket is small and most of the traffic work is on Main St. where a bicycle would be much more useful than a car.

The stop-light at Eagle and Yonge Sts. is doing a good job. The town council is expressing its appreciation to the Toronto and York Roads Commission for installing this light. There is another stop-light on Yonge St., at Lansing. On Sunday evening there was half a mile of traffic on the Lansing side-road waiting to get on Yonge St. The light turned green. Two or three cars got on Yonge St. and then the light was red again. The automatic Eagle St. light, however, on the same evening, was handling more traffic from its side-road and was handling it with a minimum of delay, greatly in contrast with the raw deal which the Lansing light was handing out to its side-road motorists.

So far we haven't been corrected on our misquotation of Julius Caesar recently. The quotation looked suspicious and we find that it should have been: "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings." We are now trying to figure out if nobody reads these columns, or if nobody reads Shakespeare.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"In the Mood"

"Why are you reading so early in the morning, Mrs. Colville?" piped up a small voice at my side. I turned to find a very little girl close beside me, eyes fixed on the book which lay open on the window sill.

"I'm getting ready to enjoy the circus parade and the circus," said I.

"But I didn't read a book before I came here to watch the parade from your window," persisted the little one.

"Well," said I, "I see the parade in the book, and then I see it on the street."

"I'd rather see it from your window anyway," said the child, but I turned to my book again with unabated enjoyment.

The book was Booth Tarkington's "Gentleman from Indiana," and as far as I know contains the most vivid and realistic description of a circus parade ever written: exactly what was needed to fit one's mood to the occasion. I turned from the book to what was passing in the street before me.

It was in the days when buggies and wagons were much more in evidence than cars; here was a wagon, with father and mother and maybe one small child on the seat, while piled in a nice straw couch behind were children of all sizes, maybe from two or three families.

Along the street went the men with their great sheafs of balloons, there too, went the vendors of popcorn and candy, and soon every child was in a state of bliss and stickiness, proudly bearing aloft a balloon.

But presently the sound of a band strikes on my ear—the quick, staccato music which seems to belong exclusively to circus bands.

"They're coming, Mrs. Colville!" yells my little friend, and I'm just in time to catch her brief skirts, ere she takes a flying leap into the crowd below, having leaned too far out and overbalanced. A glance was enough to show that "they were coming" all right. The crowd of small boys and dogs tearing down the middle of the street, and the efforts of drivers to get through their horses got the scent of the wild animals, all told a tale.

I always loved the great, dappled grey, eight-horse teams which drew the animal cages. The drivers always looked so supremely capable of handling their charges, and the reins were so skilfully placed between their fingers.

The wild animals themselves, though, bothered me—they looked so mangy and unhappy—I always felt as if I were to blame for their confinement away from the great outdoors.

In one or two circuses I have seen them sleek and well fed and contented, but they were the exception.

The camels looked as if they hated everybody, but who doesn't love to see an elephant?

The great lordly one in front and on down to the babies; the tail of each held so delicately in the trunk of the succeeding elephant. I remember seeing one having its toilet made, after the circus was over, one afternoon. It was lying flat on its side, and a keeper was sweeping it with a big broom, just as hard as he could sweep. The dust rose in clouds, but there the great beast lay, grunting with enjoyment.

Speaking of elephants, I saw a funny thing. It was a hot July day; I had gone on the noon train from Smith's Falls to Perth for a music lesson. There was a sort of fair going on near the station, and as I went to the train at five o'clock, the circus train was loading up.

Thunder was roaring and lightning flashing, and the wind came in great gusts. Just as our train moved out, there came a terrific blast—and the next thing I saw was the tent swirl through the air, leaving standing alone and trumpeting wildly—the solitary elephant which the show boasted!

Then I was whirled away and never knew the sequel. But I've gotten a long way from the parade, with its clowns and chariots, its negro band and lovely horses, but my little friend, and I, hang out of the window till the last shrill note of "Wait till the clouds roll by, Jennie," as it issued from the calliope, faded away into the distance.

Outside the crowds disperse. My little friend says primly, "Thanks for letting me look out of your window," and runs off home, and I go off to see about dinner, for on circus day no one knows what may happen—maybe half-a-dozen visitors, maybe no one.

As I work I'm enjoying my book circus in my mind, and a few hours later will have an opportunity of comparing the real thing with the picture in my mind. I generally find that a book with some bearing on anything I may be going to see or hear adds 50 per cent. to my enjoyment, and I am always looking for books which describe just ordinary things—one gets a new perspective sometimes, and even the commonest task takes on new interest.

DECIDING TO BUILD

Again we entered the open door of Pickering College. This time to attend two or three sessions of "The Yearly Meeting of Friends." We found here inspiration and high purpose. "Purpose that is bigger than self."

The first afternoon we were privileged to hear J. Barnard Walton, secretary of the Advancement Committee of the Friends General Conference. His subject was "Response of Friends to the Need of the World." Mr. Walton believed that the three great needs of the world today were peace, bread, and fellowship. "There must be a thoroughgoing change of economic relations before we can meet the need of the world."

It was striking that Mr. Walton's suggestion should be to begin this change in small groups. He felt that these forums were most educational. Groups of six, eight, at the most ten people can meet together and discuss problems with each other most effectively. They learn how to present an argument and they learn how to meet one.

Further than that, there is a social consciousness developed as well as an enthusiasm which brings in others, probably one at a time, until the group becomes too large. Then it is split into two groups. A sentiment is woven in this way which in time will become influential enough to make itself felt in the larger scheme of things. Then it is that we shall be ready to respond as a world to the needs of the world.

We heard one of the four addresses by Dr. Thomas E. Jones, president of Fiske University, Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Jones used the subject, "Christian Realism." In Christian realism lies the hope for tying together physical and social environment with religious motive. We are too prone to accept the ideas of others, thus becoming flabby. Rather we must fight through till we tie up material with eternal. We must be able to appreciate what others say but have ideas of our own. Be able to say, "This is where I stand." That we each have a destiny to fulfil was so well expressed by Dr. Jones' use of Kagawa's little poem—

I hold in my hand a plan. My hand is big because of this plan

God who dwells in my hand, Knows this secret plan Of the things He will do for the world

Using my hand! It was apparent that an unusual number of those present had in the words of Raymond Booth, "decided to build."

QUEENSVILLE YOUNG PEOPLE ENTERTAIN

The garden party and strawberry festival held in Bond Head on July 1 under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church was a decided success. The program furnished by the Queensville Y. P. U. was an exceptionally good one.

A male quartette consisting of Messrs. Murray Huntley, Fred Daw, Terry Doane and Ewart Madden gave a number of choice musical selections with just sufficient clean humor added.

Miss Helen Evans, elocutionist, gave several well-rendered recitations. The drama "Art thou Barabbas" was exceptionally well personated by Murray Huntley as Barabbas, Gladys Dew as Rachel, his wife, Fred Dew acted as Simon, a friend of Barabbas, while Ruth Cresswell took the part of Sara, Simon's wife.

The difficult role of impersonating Mary, the Mother of Jesus, was splendidly taken by Marion Burkholder. Terry Doane acted as guard. Miss Vera Arnold was the accompanist during the entire evening. Any society would be well advised to secure the services of those clever young artists to furnish a full evening's entertainment.

Johnny Hides Once Too Often

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"I'm just going to take the kiddies out for a short fly," Cora Chickadee told her husband one fine July day. "I think we'll go over to see the Nuthatches. The fresh air and exercise will do us all good."

"Fine!" said Chips. "I'll go over and have a little chat with Pecker. Have a good time, youngsters."

"I think we'll go the long way, around through the woods and make a real fly of it," Cora said. "It's so short the other way. We'll go through the woods and stop and rest every few yards so no one will be tired. Everyone keep close to me."

The Chickadee family flew slowly off and after several pauses they managed to reach the home of their Nuthatch friends. As their little party fluttered down and lighted rather breathlessly on the tree, one of the young Nuthatches saw them.

Entering a Store
you are Courteous—

Try Courtesy

When You Enter Traffic

WHEN we enter or leave a store we are all most courteous. We stand back for one another, hold open the doors, make way for the children and otherwise act in a courteous manner towards our fellow-shoppers. But do we continue this same friendly mental attitude towards each other when we get back into our cars and enter traffic again? To our fellow-shoppers, for whom we held the door open, do we show courtesy when he becomes our fellow-motorist?

Do we warn him of our intention to pass by sounding our horn? Having passed him, do we get well ahead of him before swinging back again into our traffic lane? Do we dip or dim our lights when we meet him at night? Do we keep well to the right side of the road when meeting him? Do we give him the benefit of the doubt in a "tight corner" so we can both get out of it unhurt? And do we, in the many other ways that come to our mind, act and think towards our fellow-motorist in the same kindly and considerate manner as we did when we held the door open for him as a fellow-shopper?

I earnestly request that, when you get behind the wheel of your car or truck, you continue to be the same courteous person that you are afoot and "Try Courtesy" every inch of the way.

By so doing you will help to make motoring a safe and enjoyable mode of travelling.

DR. PATTERSON WED AT HOME

Patterson Home Beautifully Decorated For Wedding On Friday

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Patterson, Water St., was decorated with palms, phlox, pink carnations and blue delphinium last Friday when their eldest daughter, Dr. Margaret Knight Patterson, became the bride of William Morley Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Campbell of Mitchell. The ceremony took place in the drawing-room before the fireplace, which was banked with flowers. Rev. M. A. J. Waters of London officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chautilly lace with a lace coronet cap and short veil. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. Her two sisters, Shirley and Irene, who acted as bridesmaids, wore suede lace gowns in Victorian style, the former in pink and the latter in blue. They carried old-fashioned bouquets of roses and pink and blue cornflowers.

Mrs. Harold Elliott, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music. Mr. Adair Campbell acted as groomsmen for his brother. During the signing of the register instrumental music was played by Miss Catherine Campbell, niece of the groom.

At the informal reception which followed, the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of delphinium blue chiffon with a corsage of Ophelia roses. Mrs. Campbell, mother of the groom, wore moss-green chiffon with a corsage of pink Briarcliff roses.

After a buffet luncheon, the bride and groom left by motor for Muskoka. The bride travelled in a navy blue ensemble with matching accessories.

Mrs. Campbell, who is a graduate of the University of Toronto in medicine, has been on the staff of the Children's Hospital in Detroit. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will reside in London, Ontario.

WEDDINGS
Headley - Newton

Alta Syrenia Newton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Newton, Armistage, became the bride of Alfred Walter Headley, Toronto, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Headley, Toronto, at a pretty wedding in Rhodes Avenue United church, Toronto, on July 1. Rev. Mr. Steele officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in a white satin gown, cut on princess lines, and a veil gathered with a halo of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of roses, cornflowers and baby's breath.

She was attended by her sister, Aletta Frances Newton, attractively gowned in pink chiffon with a small white hat with veil and matching accessories. She wore a shoulder bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. The groom was attended by his cousin, William John Headley.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. E. Johnston, Mount Pleasant Rd., Toronto. Following a motor trip to Midland, the young couple are making their home in Toronto. For travelling Mrs. Headley wore a natural linen suit with white and brown accessories.

Taylor - Sellers
A wedding of much interest took place on Saturday when Venetta Mae Sellers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Sellers of Jackson's Point, became the bride of Harvey H. Taylor, son of Mr. James Taylor and the late Mrs. Taylor. Rev. N. S. Anderson performed the ceremony and Miss Isabelle Sellers, sister of the bride, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father and looked charming in a gown of white taffeta and a coronet of lily-of-the-valley. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and lily-of-the-valley. For going away she wore a pink crepe suit with tan and white accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will live in Sutton.

POLICE COURT

HOLD SENTENCE IN DRINK CASE

Charged with being in illegal possession of liquor, H. Carter faced a minimum fine of $100 or three months in jail, in Newmarket police court on Tuesday, as an aftermath of a party near Musselman's Lake.

"I'd have to go to jail," he stated. "The jails would never be able to hold all the offenders if this law were carried out to the letter," observed counsel, urging that the charge be reduced to one of consuming.

"I'd regret sending a man to jail for three months under circumstances such as these," Magistrate J. C. Bull remarked. He remanded the case until next week.

Following an accident in which a 10-year-old child was badly injured, the case of Clarence Preston, charged with reckless driving, was adjourned one week, in the absence of the crown attorney.

Otto Svenson and Stanley Morden each paid $5 and costs on peddling charges. The case against Wm. Morden, similarly charged, was dismissed.

Allen Knight, Harry Elliott, James Lambert, Thomas Cohen, H. Mathews and Clifford Dennis paid fines for speeding. Romeo Gladu was fined $2 and costs for not having a driving permit and Leonard Wall paid $10 and costs for driving without a license. The Queen City Paper and Lumber Co. was fined $2 and costs for parking.

SUMMONS DOG TAX DALLIERS

Permits Married Men On Relief To Earn Extra Money

Married men on relief may accept farm work without losing their domicile in the municipality of ordinary residence, and without the rest of the family being cut off relief, stated a letter from the department of municipal welfare, received by the town council on Monday evening.

The town agreed to buy six poles left standing by the Bell Telephone Co. in various parts of the town, still used by the town, at $1 each, and permission was given the company to erect poles on the west side of Church St. south to Timothy St.

A petition for a sewer on Simcoe St. from Main St. to Niagara St. was referred to the solicitor, N. L. Mathews, K.C. Complaining of interference with his business, T. M. Keffer, Water St. garage man, told the council that on the night of July 1 motorists had parked their cars in front of his garage.

"On the night of July 1 I couldn't get at my east gas pump for three-quarters of an hour," Mr. Keffer said. "I couldn't use my air pump, which happens to be on the next property, but is owned by the same man as my premises. A car, half past the air pump, was locked from 8.15 p.m. to 1 a.m. There are no signs up and there is no law to prevent parking."

"We amended the by-law recently to prevent parking in front of garages," said N. L. Mathews, K.C.

"Refer it to the police commission," said Councillor Wm. Dixon. "You're a business man," Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales said to Mr. Keffer. "What would you think of banning parking on one side of Main St.?"

"It would be all right where the business is a curb business," Mr. Keffer said. "I wouldn't object to parking if I weren't dependent on a curb business." "I have sold 144 dog tags," Wellington Curtis reported to the council. "I have a number of citizens on whom I have called three or four times. They give various excuses. A number of dogs were taken out of town. I understand that they will come back in the fall."

Mr. Curtis asked instructions about the delinquents. "Summons them," Mr. Mathews advised, with the council approving.

A letter from R. W. Phillips, county clerk, forwarded a resolution of the county council asking that all municipalities hold nominations on Friday, Nov. 26, and elections, if necessary, on Dec. 6.

"Newmarket already has those dates," stated Mr. Mathews. "The Children's Aid Society plan to hold a tag day between Sept. 18 and 25," Dr. L. W. Dales informed the council. "If that is satisfactory, I will advise them." The council agreed.

Accounts passed included: County of York hospitalization, $99.62; Elman W. Campbell, $3.45; C. N. Express, 80 cents; Kenneth Mount (Decoration Day), 70 cents; Datus Crowder, $1.40; C. F. Willis, $1; Joshua Stickwood, $6.30; Newmarket Era, $42.50; E. Dennis, $47.30; Munshaw Motors, $19.88; Helmshaw Transport, $7.55; J. E. Nesbitt, $3.40; pay sheet 11, $55; Newmarket Era, $9.45.

SOFTBALLER IS WINNER OF $25

Toronto Flute Band Wins Contest, Signallers Best Marchers

The 70th anniversary of confederation was fittingly marked here last Thursday by an afternoon and evening of celebration. About 600 persons attended the softball tournament, band contest and entertainment at the fair grounds in the afternoon, and many more saw the marching contest downtown.

In the evening 400 to 500 people danced to the music of two orchestras on lower Main St., while a large crowd looked on. Winners in the marching contest for bands were the Royal Canadian Signal Corps, a smart-as-could-be brass band from Toronto, whose splendid music added greatly to the day.

Winners in the flute and drum contest were: (1) Golden Jubilee L. O. L. band, Toronto; (2) Red Marines, Oshawa; (3) Oshawa Girls' Jubilee Band. Five bands completed. Orville Ganton, leader of the Newmarket Citizens' Band, was the adjudicator.

Winner of the lucky draw, Bob Peters, of Newmarket, received a prize of $25 in cash.

Those chiefly responsible for the successful day were the following officers of the Sportsmen's Association: A. C. West, president; Frank Bowser, vice-president; Frank Courtney, treasurer; R. C. Morrison, secretary; Leo Cull, Sidney Legge, E. A. Boyd, Phil Hamilton.

JAPS ARE MOST

population are Christians," was his surprising illustration. "Christians are trusted." "Japan is only following other nations, trying to save herself by spreading out," Mr. Binford said. "Japan closed herself to the world for 300 years, in order to avoid trouble with other nations, and at the end of that time she found that Britain had established a world empire, that the little New England colonies had spread across a continent." "Are the Japanese behind the times in ideas of world peace? Are they still thinking in terms of pre-war days?" "No nation knows better what is going on in the world. Commissions are sent to all parts of the world to learn about new things of interest. There is no other newspaper in the world like the Japanese Advertiser, published in Tokyo by an American Jew. The Advertiser presents a complete picture of world news such as no other newspaper in the world presents."

AUTO SKIDDED

Hill gave similar evidence. The car skidded over 70 feet before striking the child, the evidence indicated.

"How fast were you going?" asked Harold Sanders, Stouffville, newly-appointed crown attorney. "I couldn't say, not very fast," Mr. Penrose said.

Evidence was given that a car was parked on the north side of the street. Mr. Penrose said that he did not see the child until the child was on the street, and he didn't know whether he had come out in front of the parked car or behind it. He had seen a child running toward the street before but he did not know if that were the same child, he testified later.

"If my car had gone over the curb I would have missed the child, but the wheels would not go over the curb and the car skidded along the street," Mr. Penrose said.

Willard Hall, driving with Mr. Penrose, said that the car was going 25 to 30 miles an hour.

"The child was looking right into my face as he ran across the street," Mr. Hall testified.

"Why did you not turn to the left?" Mr. Sanders asked Mr. Penrose.

"I would have hit the parked car," was the answer. Questioned further, he said that if he had turned to the left the child might have stopped and been struck anyway.

Constable Barracough said that a car at 20 miles an hour was allowed 55 feet to stop, but would not give a figure for 30 miles an hour.

Mrs. James Bond, who saw the child run out on the street, blamed the child for the accident.

H. B. Budd, photographer, identified pictures he had taken of the car and the street. There was a dent in the car's front left fender.

Dr. L. W. Dales and Dr. J. G. Cook, who attended the child, gave medical testimony. Dr. Dales performed an autopsy.

The child's father said that he had identified the body. N. L. Mathews, K.C., acted for Mr. Penrose.

Members of the jury were: W. W. Osborne, E. A. Boyd, Alex. Eves, B. W. Hunter, A. V. Higgins, Wm. Dunn, Andrew Hebb and J. E. Nesbitt.

"SHALL WE DANCE" COMES TO PALACE

"Shall We Dance," unlike earlier Astaire-Rogers offerings, starts out with both portraying stars at the top of their respective fields, Astaire as a world-renowned ballet dancer, Miss Rogers as an equally well-known revue artiste.

Because they are so famous, their every action becomes news. Consequently, when Astaire's manager carelessly gets rid of an importunate woman by telling her that Astaire is married, the rumor spreads like wildfire, and when Astaire and Miss Rogers are seen together on a trans-Atlantic liner, it is assumed that Miss Rogers is the secret bride.

Spectacular dance numbers, with Harriet Hector, America's leading ballerina, adding her terpsichorean talent to the work of the two stars, and six song hits written by George and Ira Gershwin, make up the high-lights of the film which is being hailed as the finest of all Astaire-Rogers offerings.

"Shall We Dance" comes to the Palace Theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

NEWMARKET BOWLING RINKS MEETS
Newmarket bowling rinks won first and second places at Bradford yesterday. H. B. Budd's rink of Robt. Large, W. J. Geer and Vaughan Goring were first and G. A. Binns' rink of L. B. Rose, Fred Chantler and Wm. Brown were second.

H. B. Marshall's rink of M. H. Goslett, H. P. Gilman and C. F. Willis were second for three wins at Markham. T. F. Doyle skipped another rink at Markham.

Mrs. S. J. Boyd, Mrs. H. B. Marshall and Mrs. Jack Murphy were second in ladies' trebles at Stouffville. Mrs. M. H. Goslett, Mrs. Robt. Large and Mrs. Arthur Goring were at Stouffville also.

REFUSE MOTHER PENSION

"How many children have you under 16 years?" asked Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "Six," Mrs. Calvert said. "I have three at home and my husband." "What was your relief voucher when you were in town?" asked Dr. Dales. "Nine dollars and ten cents and bread and milk in addition," Mrs. Calvert said. "There were ten in the family then," said Mr. Williams. "You have been out of Newmarket two years," said Mr. Vale. "Why do you feel that Newmarket is responsible?" "I was refused relief," said Mrs. Calvert. "I went to the department. They placed the responsibility on Newmarket. I am still fighting for a mother's allowance."

"They won't allow her a mother's allowance because her husband is an ex-serviceman," put in Dr. Dales. "They say it is a federal responsibility."

"We talk about a smart one. Whitechurch pulled on us," Dr. Dales continued. "Let's be honest. We pulled a fast one on Whitechurch. This poor mother has six children. Where is our Christianity? We got a $1,000 gift from the Davis Leather Co. for relief. Let's satisfy the department. We are all men. Let's clean this up."

"Sympathy is all very well," said Dr. Boyd. "The department has admitted that we have carried out our responsibility to the letter. Whitechurch agreed to take the responsibility. The department said that the country was the place for this family. We paid for her for two years. Two more weeks and it would have been the responsibility of Whitechurch."

"What you all say is correct," said Dr. Dales. "But it is hard to tell a bunch of hungry children what this mother did that is wrong."

Reviewing the facts of the case, N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor, said: "Newmarket supplied relief direct for a year rather than through Whitechurch, and the department ruled that Newmarket was responsible. There was a meeting of the two municipalities and the department, and Newmarket agreed that Newmarket would be responsible for a year more, supplying the relief through Whitechurch."

"There has now been correspondence with the department. They say that in view of Mrs. Calvert voluntarily moving out of the township two weeks before the year was up, Newmarket is responsible. They say that she didn't establish residence in Whitechurch. I have told them strongly that we are not responsible."

"If we have to supply relief, why take up so much time?" asked Councillor Frank Robinson. "I didn't say that we are responsible," said Mr. Mathews. "I tried hard to get another place out in Whitechurch, but someone's hand was against me," said Mrs. Calvert.

The matter was dropped until later in the meeting, and Mrs. Calvert left.

Before the matter was taken up again the council passed a resolution that the relief committee which resigned at the last meeting be reappointed, and that "all matters pertaining to relief be under its sole jurisdiction."

"She's not going to suffer in this summer weather," said Dr. Boyd, when the question was reopened with a resolution that the town assume responsibility for the Calvert family.

"What are you talking about, a sheep, horse or cow?" demanded Dr. Dales.

"The country is the best place to raise children," said Dr. Boyd. "I take exception to the statement of the department that Newmarket is not a place to raise children," said Dr. Dales.

"I am opposed to giving her relief, but I believe the matter should be settled by the relief committee," said Mr. Vale. "We have passed a resolution giving the committee full control."

"A single man like you should be ashamed," said Dr. Dales. "The reason you want Newmarket to be responsible is that you want to get medical attendance for her," said Mr. Vale. "That's your reason."

"If you distributed medical relief, nobody would get any," said Dr. Dales.

"I suggest that you are the one who advised her to move to East Gwillimbury, and also that you are the one who advised her to go to the department," said Mr. Vale.

"Withdraw that," said Dr. Dales. "Make statements, not suggestions."

Dr. Dales urged that the town "play ball with the department." "I am opposed to granting her relief after what the mayor has said," said Councillor W. W. Osborne. "But I am in favor of it if the relief committee wish to give it to her."

"The Calverts wanted to get out of Whitechurch, I think, because Whitechurch gave only what Newmarket gave," said Mr. Williams.

Councillor Wm. Dixon of the relief committee insisted that the council vote on the question of giving the Calverts relief. For, Dixon, Dales, Robinson, against, Vale, Osborne, Evans, Mr. Williams refused to vote and Dr. Boyd cast his vote for looking after the family.

jump into the B.A. course."

"The discipline is not nearly as strict. They don't say anything if you feel like taking a holiday. You can walk out in the middle of a class, and go for a swim if you like. It is quite all right with the school. We were just guests. We didn't have any work to do."

"Were you called upon in class?" "Several times. We were in a science course, mathematics, physics, chemistry, and French."

"How did you get along with the English boys?" "They were swell fellows, friendly and chummy. They took us into their class."

"The headmaster arranged trips for us to places of interest," Mr. Seldon continued. "We were quite near Dartmoor prison, and were almost arrested for trying to take pictures. They have had a riot or something recently, and are suspicious of cars stopping within a mile of the place."

"After we left the school we were taken to Folkestone, a sea-side resort, for a week for a holiday. We had tea at Dover College, one of the newest schools in England, a county day school, with the latest equipment and methods."

"We explored Dover Castle. It is a very old fortification, containing some of the original Roman walls. It was built up in Napoleon's time, and has underground passages with spiked pitfalls, and holes in the roofs of some of the passages to pour boiling oil down on invaders."

In London the party saw the new train, the Coronation Scot, which has since established a record of 114 miles per hour on its trial run.

The overseas trip was sponsored by the Empire Youth Movement, of which Major F. J. Ney was the leader. The idea, Mr. Seldon said, was to bring empire youth closer together, with the purpose of later bringing world youth together, and forwarding the cause of world peace.

Mr. Seldon attended a meeting of the movement, attended by 8,000, in Albert Hall, and heard the Duke of Gloucester and Stanley Baldwin in his last speech as prime minister.

Quality printing at low cost is offered by Era printers.

TREASURE HUNT

— By Barbara Webb

SYNOPSIS

Belinda Louise (Lindy Lou) Hillcrest receives a mysterious letter from an old colored woman, Pearl White, who worked for the Hillcrests when they lived at Twinoaks, a plantation in the south. Lindy Lou, now 19, is employed as a typist in the New York offices of Sweetland, Inc., a wholesale candy firm. She is infatuated with handsome Anton Homans, the firm's star salesman. To attract his attention she had shown him the map and letter with him at a Russian restaurant. He scoffs at the letter and map with its news of treasure hidden at Twinoaks, and almost persuades Lindy Lou there is nothing in it—that to go there would be a waste of time. He also asks her to go to the theatre and a night club with him the next evening. Lindy Lou consents, but discovers that the map is gone.

CHAPTER THREE

Lindy Lou reached home too late for dinner. The family, her quiet stooping father, Joe in shirt sleeves, and her mother wearing a thin white dress so old that Lindy Lou couldn't remember when it was new, were sitting on the porch trying to cool off when she arrived.

"I'm sorry to be late," said Lindy Lou promptly, "I'm glad you didn't wait for me. Don't get up, mother, I'll get something to eat, and wash the dishes, too."

"Yeah," said Joe scornfully, "you must have a guilty conscience to be making that kind of a crack this evening."

This was so near the truth that Lindy Lou couldn't think of an answer for it. So she said nothing, bent over to kiss her father's cheek, and then went back to her own room. Mr. Hillcrest lately seemed unreal to Lindy Lou, almost as remote as a stranger, and Lindy Lou's mother, gentle and faded, was scarcely less vague in the girl's thoughts. She was too young to realize how cruelly life had drained these two of their vitality and youth and hopeful dreams. And it would never have occurred to her to confide in them her own vigorous likes and dislikes, hopes and ambitions.

There, again, the biscuits in the warming oven, mashed turnips, a piece of fried ham, and some apple pie. Lindy Lou ate with zest and then started clearing away the dishes. Presently her mother joined her.

"I'll wash them, Lindy Lou," she said. "I don't like you spoiling your hands."

Lindy Lou laughed. "I'll wash them. When I use white soap it doesn't hurt my hands a bit. You can dry them for me."

Mrs. Hillcrest gave in, as she always did, to the more definite Lindy Lou.

"I had a letter from Aunt Fanny today," she said, as she took up a towel. "She's been back on a visit to Threeforks and she wrote me all the news from home."

Lindy Lou's heart began to beat faster. There was nothing on earth she wanted to hear about now as much as news from the old place.

"What did she have to say?" she inquired, shaking soap flakes into the dishpan and plunging her hands into the clean, soapy water.

"Well, she visited Miss Fleming and says that little Fleming is pretty pindling. There's a new grocery and old Mr. Higgins still runs the post-office. She went around quite a lot, they had two parties for her and a church social while she was there. And she wrote, too, that just the day she left, old Pearl White, who used to work for us—you ought to remember Pearl, Lindy Lou—well, old Pearl up and died. She was past 80—about 85, as near as folks down here can recollect, and she died shouting for the Lord. Pearl was great for religion, one of the old-time colored people, if there ever was one. My, but she used to take fine care of you and Joe, Lindy Lou. But especially you. She used to starch your little dresses until your skirts stuck out straight."

Mrs. Hillcrest paused and Lindy Lou bent over her dishwashing. So Pearl was dead. To Lindy Lou this made the matter of the lost map more serious than ever. She waited for her mother to continue and presently Mrs. Hillcrest droned on, telling bits from Aunt Fanny's letter about people whom Lindy Lou no longer remembered at all.

"What has happened to Twinoaks?" Lindy Lou asked, when the news of the letter was exhausted.

"No one's living there now," her mother answered. "Haze! been a soul in the house that I know of since 1860."

"Where's the house?" Mrs. Hillcrest asked.

"I don't know," Mrs. Hillcrest answered. "I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

"I feel like I've got a weight on my chest," she thought as she went down today and saw one of the old people who had lived there. "I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

I suppose the county's holding it for taxes and nobody down there with money enough even to clear off the taxes and take possession. It was a good farm once, too, and a fine built house."

"How old a house, papa?" Lindy Lou asked.

"The middle part was built by your great-grandfather, over a hundred years ago. There was a fire once that burned a wing away and your grandpa rebuilt that when I was a boy. Fine timber in the place, good old fireplaces all plumb and true with chimneys that draw, and beams in the ceilings. If it wasn't so far south we might find some yankee to take it off our hands and restore it. But shucks, no stranger's stayed in Threeforks longer than he had to for more'n thirty years I reckon."

"Would you like to go back?" Lindy Lou asked.

Mr. Hillcrest sighed. "If I had the money to fix the place up, and money enough to hire the crops put in—but then I'm not a farmer, Lindy Lou, I never was. I'm not much of an architect either," he spoke bitterly, "not much of anything I reckon. Just shiftless."

"Why Horace Hillcrest, you're no such thing!" Lindy Lou's mother defended him warmly. "You've just been unlucky, that's all. Every one knows that the Hillcrests have always been a family. After all you married a Carter, don't forget." Mrs. Hillcrest was a Carter and felt that her husband had at least one real achievement to his credit, in having won her for his wife.

Lindy Lou laughed tenderly. "Funny parents," she said, "you stand up for each other anyway. And you've stayed married for more than twenty years now, and that's more than a lot of folks up here can say."

They all laughed together at this, and presently Lindy Lou asked thoughtfully, "Were any of the Hillcrests ever rich, papa?"

Mr. Hillcrest considered. "Your great-grandpa was a very likely man, Lindy Lou. He raised big cotton crops before the war, and he was accounted a big man in the county. I don't know as any of them were ever very rich, but certainly none of them until this generation was ever poor either."

"You forget about Great-Grandma Forrester," Mrs. Hillcrest reminded him.

"Yes, that's so. Your great-grandpa married a Forrester and the Forresters had money. I've heard it said she brought him quite a dowry. But like every one else they lost everything in the war and things never were the same afterward."

Confirmation

Lindy Lou's heart pounded. Her theory seemed sound in the light of this story, a prosperous plantation owner — her great-grandfather — married to a wealthy wife — her great-grandmother. The Civil War ruining them—but what more likely than that this same great-grandmother had hidden treasure at Twinoaks?

"You said old Pearl was past 80 when she died," Lindy Lou addressed her mother. "Did she know my great-grandparents?"

"She belonged to them," Mrs. Hillcrest answered. "Her father and mother belonged on the place and she was born there. After the war they set her free, but she always stayed around Threeforks and she always liked to work at Twinoaks better than any place else."

Lindy Lou sighed happily. The last bit of proof she needed was hers now. But dashing her joy came the thought of the missing map. And that calamity so filled her mind that she finished the kitchen work in silence and went at once to her room to sit brooding by the window.

She went to bed early, but not to sleep. She stared at the ceiling and conjured up pictures of her childhood at Twinoaks — the house, rather vague, but huge and white in her memory. Old Pearl, also huge but with a shining black good-humored face. The location of burns and trees and other landmarks was more difficult for her to manage, but she thought long and long about them until she felt she could once again find her way around Twinoaks if she had to.

The house grew still. The noises on the street were hushed one by one. Lights blinked out and by half past one poor Lindy Lou, still wide awake, was hearing things. Mysterious rustlings reminded her of the stories of "hants" she had heard as a little child. A light sliding slowly across the ceiling—Lindy Lou knew it was a passing car—but she shivered just the same, recalling the "spirits that walked with brimstone candles" in Pearl's romances.

Altogether it was a dreadful night, for even after she fell asleep Lindy Lou dreamed awful dreams, and woke tired and listless.

"I feel like I've got a weight on my chest," she thought as she went down today and saw one of the old people who had lived there. "I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

"I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

"I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

"I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

"I don't know where it is, but I know it's there."

well, thank goodness, Anton isn't interested. He just thinks I'm plumb crazy, so he won't remember it. But after I get my hands on that map again no power on earth will make me give any one else a look at it."

Anticipation

Her mother commented on her pale cheeks. "You'd better come home and get in bed tonight, Lindy Lou, and let me bring your supper to you on a tray. You look washed out. It's the heat, I reckon."

"All right," Lindy Lou agreed, then suddenly she remembered. "Oh, but I can't, mamma. I've got a date, a terribly nice date."

"Who with?" Joe demanded. Mr. Hillcrest had left for his work, and Joe and his sister were breakfasting together.

"Who wants to know?" Lindy Lou inquired sweetly.

"I do."

"Well, it's with a perfectly swell fellow, Anton Homans, from the office, and he's taking me to the theatre, and after that we're going to a party with dancing at some night club."

Joe whistled. "Stepping out, aren't you? Well, it's time to use those dimples of yours. What'd you say the name of this fellow was? Anton? Sounds like a bootlegger to me."

Mrs. Hillcrest was impressed with the program. "Gracious, Lindy Lou, what will you wear?"

"Oh, my goodness," said Lindy Lou crossly. "I never thought about that. I haven't got a single decent thing."

"There's your dotted swiss. I'll do it up for you today."

"Oh, mother, not that. I have to have an evening dress. We're going to a night club, I tell you."

Joe rose from the table. "If I was mother I wouldn't let you go. You're too young to be going around to night clubs with fellows the family doesn't know."

Lindy Lou ignored him. "I'll ask Miss Tanner to let me come home early. I think she will, and I'll buy a dress on the way home. Then, if it needs altering, you will do it for me, mother? I won't be leaving before 8 and I'll try to get home by 11."

"Of course, I will, honey. Here, I've got $5 I can let you have, if you need money."

Lindy Lou kissed her mother. "I won't use it unless I have to," she promised. "I've got $15 of my own. Now I must run."

It was funny, she thought, as she hurried to the subway, that she should have forgotten that date with Anton in her absorption over the treasure.

"Two days ago I didn't have a thing on my mind at all," she reflected, "and now I'm in such a whirl I don't know where to turn first."

She arrived at the office and promptly went through her desk again. No sign of the map. Then she set busily to work so Miss Tanner would find her typing away when she came in and perhaps be more agreeable about letting Lindy Lou off at 4. Miss Tanner arrived and looked at her approvingly. But Lindy Lou knew better than to ask for favors just then. Miss Tanner was always more agreeable after lunch.

By 9.30 the office was humming away and Lindy Lou was planning in her mind a way to manage a search at noon for the map. She'd wait until every one had gone out to lunch. Surely, surely the map was somewhere about.

Credulous Youth
"Telephone call for you," Walter stood at her desk. "Must be your boy friend, Lindy Lou, he seemed in an awful hurry."

Lindy Lou went to the telephone. "Yes?" she said.

"Lindy Lou? It was Anton's voice. 'How are you, honey? Say, listen, I found your map.'"

"You did?"

"Yes, I knew how badly you felt about it, so I went back and looked some more last night after you went home. I found it jammed between the back of the drawer and the desk. I'd have called you at home but I didn't think you wanted your family to know."

and she began to make plans for getting away to hunt for it.

Miss Tanner came in early, saw Lindy Lou at her desk and came over to chat amiably.

"I've been trying to get all caught up," Lindy Lou told her, "because I'd like to leave at 4 this afternoon."

"I think we could manage it. I never mind doing favors for you girls if you earn them."

Day Dreaming
And that was settled. Lindy Lou passed the afternoon not too usefully for Sweetland, Inc. She typed of course, but one minute she was wondering what kind of evening dress to buy, and the next minute she saw herself digging up a huge box of gold-pieces from under a tree at Twinoaks. For Lindy Lou had decided that the treasure must be buried under some tree on the place.

At 4 o'clock precisely she left the office and went to a store she knew that specialized in pretty but inexpensive clothes. Half an hour later she came out and started home with a box under her arm. A black lace dress—Lindy Lou felt awfully grown up to have one. It had such darling swishy skirts, too, and her arms and shoulders were surely white against that fine lace background.

Her mother was waiting for her with a troubled expression on her face.

"Oh, Lindy Lou, your papa's home and I told him about your plans for the evening, and he says you can't go."

"Can't go? Whyever not?"

"Well, we don't know this young man, and papa says night clubs are dangerous places for young girls. Oh, he's in a terrible fix about it."

Lindy Lou considered. "You come in here and sit my dress, mamma, then while you're sewing it, I'll talk to papa. I've just got to go tonight."

Mrs. Hillcrest shook her head doubtfully. "All right, honey, but I don't think you can change him. He can be terribly stubborn."

Lindy Lou's chin went up. "So am I, I'm a Hillcrest, too, and I can be just as stubborn as any of the rest of them."

Orchard Beach

This popular resort was alive with visitors and guests over the holiday.

The new road makes a fine drive all the way to Jackson's Point. It would seem that the section laid last fall from Keswick to island Grove is much better than the remaining section to the Point. Perhaps they were in just a little too much of a hurry to get it finished for July 1 and did not have time to roll it flat.

At any rate it is nice and hard and is not nearly as noisy as the old gravel road. The writer has covered over 10,000 miles during the past few years, touring the eastern States, and does not remember any eight miles that could compare in lake scenery to this road. It certainly is a beautiful drive.

At the Union church on Sunday the minister was the Rev. Ernest W. Stapleford of Regina College, Regina, and the congregation was delighted with the two excellent sermons he gave them.

Mr. Don Robertson is spending the summer with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Robertson. It is hoped the clear air and pleasant surroundings will enable him to regain perfect health.

Mrs. G. W. Yates is slowly recovering from a long illness in York County Hospital and is able to be home again.

The golf course is in splendid shape. Experienced golfers claim that the greens compare very favorably with any high-class course around Toronto, and this is to the credit of Geo. Hamilton and his sons Phil and Gordon.

Several of the Yates cottages have changed hands. Three at least have been sold, and Fire Chief Sinclair, Mr. W. Bissell and Mr. Ken Smith are welcomed to the community.

Miss Vera Raff is spending a week with Mrs. Geo. Hamilton. The changes in the Raff cottage are nearly completed and gardeners are at work landscaping the front lawn.

Mrs. W. H. Thomson and Miss Eva Bartley are settled in their cottage for the summer.

Mrs. George B. Ramsay and daughter Anne of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., are spending July with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Carhart.

Snowball

A pleasant evening was spent when the Snowball people turned out to say adieu to their teacher, who is leaving. She received many good wishes for her future happiness. The following expression of appreciation was given:

"To Miss Hazel McBride: It is with deep regret that we are about to sever our community relationship with you. We feel we could not allow you to go without expressing our appreciation of your teaching in our school for the last five years.

"Indeed we have appreciated the interest you have taken in our youth. Your many kindnesses shown them and your care of their physical health will not soon be forgotten by us and the children. Your company and musical talent have been well enjoyed.

"When parting with you, it is with hope that we may frequently have the opportunity of seeing you and visiting with you during the coming years. It is our sincere wish that your future may be freighted with happiness and your life crowned with success.

"We meet on this occasion to express our regret in parting with you, and as a slight expression of every high regard in which you are held we ask you to accept this club bag, and with it, our very best wishes for your health, happiness and prosperity.

"Signed on behalf of the section and trustees, Messrs. Appleton, Johnson and Casey."

The Snowball garden party proved to be a great success. The supper was very daintily arranged and the strawberries were at their best. The ladies are certainly to be congratulated on it, and they in turn are very much indebted to those who so willingly helped with the entertainment, and also to Mr. Case, the chairman.

Because Decoration Day was held on Sunday at Kettleby, Snowball held no church or Sunday-school.

"Were you presented at Court when you were in England?"

"Yes, and had to pay five pounds' fine."

MOUNT ALBERT TEACHER WINS GREAT PRAISE

The annual picnic of S. S. No. 12, East Gwillimbury, was held at Jackson's Point on Tuesday of last week. Children of all ages took part in the games, and the softball game between teams headed by Norman Lunau of Mount Albert and George Crittenden of Queensville was won by the former with a small margin.

After lunch Joseph W. Marritt spoke briefly on the three years of successful teaching by Miss Mary Raymer, who is leaving the school this year. He then read the following address to Miss Raymer:

"Having learned with deep regret that you are about to leave us, we take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation of your services to this community during the years you have been teacher.

"You have not only given excellent instruction in the school, but you have taken a deep interest in the welfare of the children in your care and in the homes of this section.

"Your modest and cheerful disposition has made a lasting impression on the characters of the children.

"We also thank you for your efforts in getting our Sunday-school started. This will no doubt have lasting and far-reaching results in many lives.

"We therefore, as a school section, and as a Sunday-school, wish to show our appreciation by asking you to accept this lamp as a small token of our regard and esteem. In the future, as its light shines on you, may it bring to your mind many happy memories of your services here, and may the Light of Life light your pathway and grant you continual health, happiness and prosperity in whatever sphere of life you may be."

The address was signed on behalf of the school by Jos. W. Marritt, E. Allen and L. Sedore, and on behalf of the Sunday-school by Robert Harrison, Mrs. W. Warren and Mrs. C. Cryderman.

Miss Raymer was taken by surprise, but thanked the parents for the co-operation she had received in all she had tried to do for the betterment of the community. She was more than pleased, she said, by the way the parents answered her request that a Sunday-school be started to try to help the children that were not attending any such organization.
